PHILIPPINE PUBLIC DEVELOPMENT.

A liberal policy of development for the Philippines is implied in recommendations made by General Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs of the War Department. He urges the passage of a bill pending in the House, having passed the Senate last session, which raises the limit of further borrowing for public improvements in the islands from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. The governor general with the support of the Philippine commission had earnestly recommended this legislation and the secretary of war had approved it. A bonded indebtedness of five millions was authorized by congress in 1905, for the construction of port works, bridges on highways, schools and other improvements, and under three issues of bonds the money has been raised and nearly all expended. Together with the safeguards provided to guarantee careful consideration before any issue of bonds can be made, the present excellent financial condition of the islands is argued in favor of the measure.

General Edwards says that "the summarization of trade returns is ample to show that the establishment of free commercial relations between the two countries marks a new era in the material development of the islands. In both imports and exports the values recorded far exceeded those of any previous year. Imports amounted to $37,067,630 and were $9,275,233 in excess of those of 1909, while there was an increase of $8,870,606 in the export total of $39,864,169 for 1910. In both branches of the trade the United States was credited with the larger part of those increases, imports of American goods more than doubling in value and exports increasing more than 80 per cent." He mentions that the operation of the postal savings bank has been successful, there having been about 230,287 pesos deposited by 4320 persons, and he recommends that the rate of interest be increased from 2 1/2 to 3 per cent.

Hawaii is participating heavily in the increase of trade with the Philippines above mentioned. For the ten months ended October 31 last, the imports to this Territory from its sister archipelago were $107,183, against $6821 for the corresponding period of 1909, while the shipments of domestic products from Hawaii thence were $23,144, against $1737 in 1909, and of foreign goods $2016 against nothing. The aggregate trade between the Philippines and Hawaii for the ten months of last year stated was thus $132,343, being an increase of $123,785, or 94.28 per cent, over the same period the year before. The balance of trade was against Hawaii to the amount of $82,023. When Honolulu begins manufacturing sugar mills for the Philippines, as it probably will before long, the balance should swing the other way.

Different state legislatures have bills pending to regulate aviation practice and meets. Unless the death record of the public exhibitions be reduced, they will before long stand a strong chance of being abolished—like public executions and for much the same reason.

Winter touring is being heavily featured now by the great dailies as well as the magazines. Hawaii receives mention in all of the displays. A late issue of the Sunday Public Ledger, Philadelphia, contains a four-page winter touring section, the front page consisting of a colored design. Under the sub-head "A Pacific Paradise" it gives the following paragraph:

A stop at the Hawaiian Islands makes a delightful break in the homeward voyage across the Pacific. They have been called "the Paradise of the Pacific," and it was in reference to Hawaii that Mark Twain said: "No alien land has any deep, strong charm for me but that one; no other land could so longingly and beseechingly haunt me. Other things leave me, but it abides."

CLIMBED UP TO THE SUMMIT OF MAUNA KEA

HILLO, January 12.—In view of the present movement which is on foot, under the auspices of the Trail and Mountain Club, to make the trails and places of interest in Hawaii better known and more accessible, the trip of a party of Hilo young men to the top of Mauna Kea, is of some interest. On Monday following Christmas Mr. Willard of the Engineer's staff on the breakwater, Edward Maby, Mr. Clowes and a party of four boarding school boys started from Hilo on a walking trip up the mountain. They left the boarding school about eight in the morning, and stopped for lunch at the end of the Kaumana road. After lunch they followed the trail to Shipman's ranch. They camped for the night by a cave that is about two or three hours walk from the end of the Kaumana road. The next morning they got as far as Hale Aloha, and by night they reached Puu Oo. The following morning they started unguided for the summit. They found the route easy following brief directions given them at the ranch. They reached the snow after about five hours climbing and an hour more brought them to the top of a peak that is about a mile and a half from the summit. At this point five of the party started back to the ranch, but two went on to the summit. These two had to stay out on the mountain all night and found sleeping in the snow rather chilly.

The following morning the main part of the party left Puu Oo at about 6:30 and by dint of hard walking, reached the end of the Kaumana road about 2 p. m. Here they were met by a conveyance which carried them to Hilo.

Mr. Clowes is enthusiastic about the trip and says that with very little expenditure the trip could be made very safe and comparatively easy. He suggests the erection of one or two shelter houses with tanks for water, and the better marking of the trail from Hale Aloha to the summit. He thinks that if these shelters were erected, it would save the possibility of giving trouble to the ranches. Water is quite a consideration, but in the winter, it is not so hard to obtain.

It is interesting to know that the party were caught in fog on the trip down from the top, but by the aid of compasses they were able to find their way.

There was also consideration given to the Dooliver-Davis bill. Under this bill it is desired in June 1914, to release $5,000,000, and annually thereafter a similar sum for the establishment and maintenance of agricultural schools in the United States and territory.

It was pointed out that this would be an extremely great help to Hawaii, and therefore, it was resolved to ask Delegate Kuhio to support it.

wind, rough sea and rainy weather all the way in from Kilauea.

The Noeau came in this morning with news of having passed an overturned canoe off Barber's Point. There was nothing to show to whom the craft belonged, but it is anticipated that it had broken away from its moorings and drifted out to sea, though of course a more serious explanation may be forthcoming.

TO GET OFF.

George C. Boldt, the well known hotel man of New York, praised the other day truffled turkey.

"Turkey is our national dish for Christmas and New Year day," he said, "and truffled turkey is the world's national dish. It is incomparable."

"Rossini," he said, "was once promised by a friend a dinner of turkey and truffles. The friend, however, showed a disposition to postpone the feast and to make excuses. But Rossini, buttonholing him one day, said: 'Look here, how about that truffled turkey dinner?'"

"Truffles are no good at this season," said his friend.

"Bah! Don't you believe it," said Rossini. "That report was started by the turkeys."

NOT FOR MONEY.

Walter Winans, the noted horseman, lives in England, and on his recent American visit a reporter asked him at the horse show what he thought of international marriages.

"International marriages," said Mr. Winans, who belongs to the Baltimore family of that name, "are just as good as any other kind, provided the girl and the man are all right. The girl is, as a rule, all right, but the man is too often a fortune hunter, who should never have been presented to the girl."

Mr. Winans smiled.

"A Chicago father," he resumed, "said to his foreign son-in-law the other day:

"'Count, I'm ruined! Every cent is lost!'"

The count whistled.

"Then, by jove," he said softly, "I did marry for love, after all."

Let's train our children towards big, broad, useful citizenship. The FLORAL PARADE offers a fine lesson. Let's give them a chance.

YOU can't tell by the appearance of milk whether or not it is pure. It may be rich and reasonably clean, but unless the Bacteria have been destroyed, it is not safe.

If you have an idea that tinned milk isn't just as delightful to the taste as fresh milk its because you have in mind the old fashion condensed milks. Try CARNATION for cooking, for Tea or coffee, on berries. It's delicious.

"It also cured my daughter, who is 17 years old. She took one bottle according to directions. I assure you that no doctor is equal to your book and your advice. I have recommended your remedy to a number of persons."

A Woman's Remedy.

Mrs. A. E. Stouffer, Capoma, Kansas, writes:

"Peruna has given me health and strength; it is the best medicine that was ever made for women. My friends say they never saw such a change in a woman. I cannot say too much for Peruna."
